

Dear Sir,

Eels are said to inhabit all waters, even land-locked ones many miles from rivers. I wonder. I have never heard of any being caught at Gobians Lake or at London Colney.

Not many months ago Brian Vesey-Fitzgerald writing in one of the angling journals, described a good eel water as muddy and overgrown - a description befitting Gobians Lake.

Then there is London Colney. Big, deep, and fed by a river. Eels should have no trouble in getting in there!

Has anyone ever heard of them being in either of these waters? I should very much like to know.

(It is doubtful whether the Gobians Warden Group will be very appreciative of the asperations cast upon their waters! Ed.)

Dear Sir,

Here at last is a journal for which the majority of us have been waiting. There must be many members who like myself are prevented by domestic ties from making an appearance at all club meetings. However, on those rare occasions when I can get to the meetings I am like the proverbial fish out of water by being so hopelessly out of touch with club affairs. Here there is a chance through the pages of "Quill" to get-up on club news and to express our views which would otherwise go unheard. I therefore extend a big welcome to "Quill" and feel confident that it will receive the support it so richly deserves.
